LIS 502 A/B/C: Policy Tracking Paper

Assignment (reprinted from the 502 syllabus):

Purpose

The Policy Tracking Paper provides an opportunity to consider a current LIS issue and dig into some library resources while thinking about how you present information in a succinct and useful manner. This is a very practical assignment requiring research skills and the abilities to analyze and synthesize, set limits and establish priorities, and advise on information strategies.

Assignment

This assignment asks you to provide resources for tracking a public policy issue. In order to do so, you must briefly summarize the issue, and articulate recent developments. Following your summary of the topic you must recommend a strategy for monitoring the issue you have chosen to discuss, including library databases. Your strategy should include an explanation of why you chose some resources and not others. At the end of the paper, you should provide a bibliography of the resources you used to compile your summary and development sections.

You must choose ONE of the four topics listed below. Your 4-6 page paper should be double-spaced, 12 point font, with 1 inch margins. The

Search the web

For up-to-the-minute information, the Web is a good place to start. However, Google and other search engines can eas overwhelm you with too much information that isn't relevant. Here are some guides that can help you improve your Goo searching skills:

- Google Guide - a tutorial on "making searching even easier."
- Finding Information on the Internet - web searching tutorial from the Teaching Library at UC-Berkley
- Comparison of Google Books and Google Scholar, from the Teaching Library at UC-Berkeley.

Or go to the source for help: Google's Web Search Help Center

HINT: Look for organizations, advocacy groups, university research centers, and government agencies that address the issue. These often have additional links on their sites. But be aware of potential bias.
