Abstract

This is a report on a survey of universities and polytechnics in the UK undertaken in 1983 to determine the provision of training and services related to communication in the humanities. The survey investigated the training provided for students by humanities departments and libraries in locating reference sources; the extent of online searching for humanities users; the provision of instruction on techniques of oral and written presentation; and the availability and use of computers in the humanities in academic institutions. The major finding was that there has been a rapid increase in the availability and use of computerised facilities, which can be expected to continue in the near future.
